

Meet Milky - Your New Best Friend!

Get ready for the most amazing Christmas adventure ever! Meet Milky, the sweetest little dog who loves exploring the world and discovering incredible animals from sparkling oceans to snowy mountains.

What's Inside Your Adventure Book:

Exciting Short Stories: Milky's world adventure from the Netherlands, Milky's Iceland adventure, Milky's Australian Bush adventure, Milky's African adventure, Milky's New Zealand adventure, Milky's Turkey adventure, Milky's Island adventure and Milky's final farwell story.

Fun Activities: Solve Word Searches, Spot the Differences, Crack Riddles, play "Who Am I?", Fill in the Blank games and Color Beautiful Pictures.

Amazing Animals: Learn fascinating facts about creatures from around the world, all with fun Christmas rhymes!

Milky has three other books full of exciting photo's of animals and even under water creatures.

Hey little Hedghog, this is a great place to hide

Shhh! Its Christmas
soon so it will get busy!

Milky and the Hidden Hedgehog

Little dog Milky ran out to play,
On a cold and windy Christmas day.
He saw some leaves all brown and red,
Moving around like someone's bed.

Under the leaves so warm and deep,
A little hedgehog tried to sleep.
His spiky coat was rolled up tight,
To keep him safe throughout the night.

"Hello," said Milky, "what's your name?
Would you like to play a game?"
The hedgehog peeked out with one small eye,
"I'm Spike," he said, "I'm rather shy."

"It's Christmas time, come out and see,
There are bright lights on every tree!"
Spike rolled out from his leafy bed,
With bits of leaves upon his head.

Now Milky and Spike are friends so dear,
They play together all through the year.
But Christmas time is best of all,
When leaves are down and friends can call.

Milky's Fun Facts

Hedgehogs have about 5,000 spiky quills on their backs! When they get scared, they roll up into a tight ball like a spiky soccer ball. Their quills are like tiny toothpicks that protect them from other animals who might want to bother them.

Baby hedgehogs are called hoglets, and they're born without any spikes! They look like tiny pink jellybeans when they're first born. Their spikes start growing in after just a few hours, but they're soft at first so they don't hurt their mama.

Hedgehogs love to run and can run as fast as you can ride your bike! Even though their legs are really short, they can zoom around at 4 miles per hour. They also love to climb and swim, which is pretty amazing for such a round, spiky little animal!

Milky's World Adventure

Milky is no ordinary dog. With her long sausage body and short stubby legs, she looks like most 'wiener' dogs, but her coat tells a different story. She is what is called a Piebald Dachshund. That means her coat has special coloring. Her parents both had the recessive gene called S-locus, so she was born with beautiful white patches on her tan coat. On top of that, there are small tan spots scattered over her body! Most of her brothers and sisters were born with the normal brown coloring, so she is very special.

Locus S : White Spots

Her name is special too. When the human family adopted her, they had a beloved dog named Oreo—a black and white dog who had been their faithful companion for years. When they saw little Milky with her white and tan-colored spots, they knew straight away what her name should be—"Milk".

Oreos and milk have one of the most famous food partnerships ever, so they knew that Oreo and Milk would become great friends!

Milky, as she is called, had already traveled quite a journey for such a young pup. Born under the bright African sun in South Africa, she had crossed the ocean with her human family to the tulip fields of the Netherlands. But life had one more adventure in store for her. When the family's Australian friend, Linda, visited and fell in love with Milky's adventurous spirit, they knew she belonged with someone who shared her love for exploration.

Now living in Linda's cozy house near Rotterdam, Milky had become well known in the neighborhood. Every morning, she would slip through the garden gate and set off on her daily adventures.

One sunny Tuesday, Milky's nose caught an interesting scent near the canal. Following it with her tail wagging, she discovered Hendrik, a hedgehog who was stuck upside down after tumbling off a low stone wall.

"Oh my!" squeaked Hendrik. "I can't seem to right myself!"

Quickly, Milky used her long snout to gently nudge the hedgehog back onto his feet.

"Thank you, spotted friend!" Hendrik said, brushing off his spines. "I'm Hendrik. I've lived by this canal for seven years, but I've never seen a dog quite like you."

"I'm Milky," she replied proudly. "I'm from South Africa originally, but I've traveled to many places. These spots make me special—they're called piebald markings!"

Hendrik's eyes twinkled. "Special indeed! Would you like to meet my friend Greta? She's a canal duck who's also quite the traveler."

They found Greta preening her emerald-green feathers on the canal. When she heard about Milky's world-wide journey, her eyes lit up.

"A fellow world traveler!" Greta quacked excitedly. "I travel thousands of kilometers every year. But tell me, little spotted one, what's the most amazing thing about your travels?"

Milky thought carefully, her little head tilting to one side. "Well, I've learned that everywhere I go, kindness speaks the same language. In South Africa, I helped a meerkat find his family. In the Netherlands, I've learned Dutch words from the neighborhood cats. And now I live with Linda, who teaches me English phrases while showing me pictures of the animals in her home in Australia."

"That's beautiful," chirped a small voice from above. They looked up to see Willem, a robin perched on a bicycle handlebar. "I've been listening to your story. My grandmother always said that home isn't just one place—it's everywhere you've spread kindness and made friends."

Milky's tail wagged so hard her whole body wiggled. "Exactly! That's why I love exploring. Every day I meet new friends and learn something new. My spots remind me that being different is wonderful, and my travels have taught me that the world is full of friends waiting to be met."

Just then, Linda's voice echoed across the canal. "Milky! Where's my little adventurer?"

"That's my human calling," Milky said with a grin. "She worries when I'm gone too long, even though she knows I always come back with new stories."

"Before you go," said Hendrik, "promise you'll come back tomorrow? Greta was just telling me about a family of rabbits who've moved into the park. They could use a friend to show them around."

"I promise!" Milky barked happily. "Adventures are always better when shared with friends!"

As Milky trotted home on her short legs, her piebald coat shining in the afternoon sun, she reflected on how perfect her life was. Born in South Africa, raised in the Netherlands, and now loved by an Australian living near Rotterdam—she truly was a dog of the world.

When she reached Linda, she received the usual scratches behind her ears and a gentle warning about wandering off. But Linda's smile gave her away—she loved hearing about Milky's daily adventures almost as much as Milky loved having them.

That evening, as Milky curled up in her favorite spot by the window, she could see the canal where her new friends lived. Tomorrow would bring new adventures, new friends, and new stories to tell. After all, when you're a special piebald dog who's traveled the world, every day is an opportunity for magic.

And in her dreams that night, Milky ran through fields of African grass, Dutch tulips, and Australian wildflowers, her distinctive spots marking her as a dog who belonged everywhere and nowhere—and everywhere in between. She also dreamt about being under the ocean amongst the most fascinating and friendliest creatures in the world. Life was wonderful!

PS: Christmas is Milky's absolute favorite time of year! Her spotted tail wags non-stop as soon as the decorations come out. She has a special talent for "helping" wrap presents by stealing ribbons and running around the house with them trailing behind her like colorful streamers. On Christmas morning, she's always the first one awake, bouncing excitedly by the tree until everyone else gets up. Her favorite Christmas treat is wearing her little red Santa hat and posing for family photos. She's also become quite the expert at finding where the Christmas cookies are hidden, though she's learned that chocolate ones are definitely off-limits for little dogs!

Milky the Adventurer

Milky met the Peacock in the garden. There are some other creatures in the garden, can you find them? What do you think Milky and the Peacock would say to each other? Write your answer here:

Milky's Fun Fact

Only the boys have the fancy feathers! The males are called peacocks and have those spectacular colorful tail feathers, while the females (called peahens) are brown and much plainer. The males show off their beautiful feathers like a giant fan to impress the ladies!

Those "eyes" on their feathers aren't really eyes. The circular patterns on peacock tail feathers are called "ocelli" and they look like giant eyes staring at you. Peacocks can rattle their tail feathers to make the "eyes" shimmer and dance, which helps scare away predators who think a big creature is watching them.

Peacocks can fly, even though they look too fancy for it! Despite having such long, elaborate tail feathers, peacocks are actually pretty good fliers. They usually fly up into trees at night to sleep safely away from ground predators.

Milky's Fun Christmas Riddles

Guess what I am

Milky says that all the answers are also there, just look at the pictures if you dare!

Easy Riddles

- I'm red and white and very sweet, I look like a walking stick to eat!
- I have a carrot nose and buttons three, I'm made of snow, can you guess me?
- I jingle and ring on Santa's sleigh, I help him find his Christmas way!
- I'm green and tall with lights so bright, I stand inside your house at night!

Medium Riddles

- I have antlers on my head so wide, I help Santa on his Christmas ride!
- I'm wrapped with paper, tied with bows, what's inside me? Nobody knows!
- I'm round and shiny, hang up high, on Christmas trees I catch your eye!
- I'm made of snow, I'm big and round, I roll and roll along the ground!

Slightly Harder

- I come down chimneys without a sound, I leave you gifts that can be found!
- I'm white and cold and fall from sky, I make the world look dressed up high!
- I hang by the fireplace, long and thin, Santa fills me up again!

Color Milky and her Friends

We were told Santa is on his way so we will just wait here in case he needs directions

Great! I have been waiting here for days, so thanks for the tip.

Milky the Dog and the Lion Cubs Wait for Santa

In the grass so green and wide,
Lives a dog with fur so white.
Milky plays with lion cubs three,
Who wait for Santa happily.

The cubs run around and play,
While Milky wags her tail all day.
"When will he come?" the babies cry,
Soon," barks Milky, "Santa will fly.

"They made a list with little paws,
Milky helped without a pause.
The cubs want toys and yummy treats,
While Milky wants some bones to eat.

The stars shine down, so bright and high, On Christmas Eve across the sky. Will Santa find them by their tree? They wait together, full of glee.

Milky's Fun Facts

Lion cubs can't see for their first week of life and rely completely on their mothers. They're born weighing only about 2-4 pounds, making them incredibly vulnerable in the wild.

Lion's can't roar until they're about 2 years old - Instead, they make adorable chirping, mewling, and squeaking sounds to communicate with their mothers. Their vocal cords aren't developed enough for them to roar until they're nearly adults.

Baby lions are born with spots similar to leopards, which help camouflage them in tall grass. These spots gradually fade as they grow older, usually disappearing completely by the time they're adults.

Milky's Iceland Adventure

Milky was a small dog with tan and white fur and the biggest heart. She loved making friends with every animal she met. Milky lived with her family in a cozy house, but what she loved most was going on adventures to new places.

One morning, Milky's family packed their bags for a very special trip. "We're going to Iceland!" said her mom. Milky had never heard of Iceland before, but it sounded exciting. She wagged her tail so hard that her whole body wiggled.

After a long airplane ride, Milky stepped off the plane and gasped. Everything was different! The air was crisp and clean, and everywhere she looked, she saw the most amazing sights. There were mountains covered in snow, bubbling hot springs that made steam rise into the sky, and fields of bright green moss that looked like a fairy tale.

On their first day, Milky's family decided to visit a place called the Golden Circle. As they drove along the winding roads, Milky pressed her nose against the car window, watching for any animals she might see. Suddenly, she spotted something incredible – a group of wild Icelandic horses with long, flowing manes running across a field.

"Stop the car!" Milky barked excitedly, though of course her family only heard happy yips.

When they stopped for a break, Milky carefully approached the fence where the horses were grazing. The horses had never seen such a small, cute dog before, and they came over to have a better look. The biggest horse, with a mane like spun silver, gently lowered his head to sniff Milky.

"Hello," Milky wagged her tail. "I'm Milky, and I'm exploring your beautiful country!"

The horse's name was Frost, and he told Milky about all the wonderful animals that lived in Iceland. "If you want a real adventure," Frost said, "you should visit the puffin cliffs by the ocean. But be careful – it's a long way, and the path can be tricky."

Milky's eyes sparkled with excitement. A real adventure! That night, while her family slept in their hotel, Milky quietly slipped out through the window. She had learned to be very good at opening windows during her many adventures.

Following Frost's directions, Milky trotted through the Icelandic night. The sun barely set during summer in Iceland, so even though it was nighttime, the sky glowed with a magical light. She walked past bubbling geysers that shot hot water high into the air, and across fields where tiny foxes played in the distance.

As Milky got closer to the ocean, she could hear the sound of waves crashing against rocks and thousands of birds calling to each other.

The path became steep and rocky, and Milky had to be very careful where she stepped. Her small size was actually helpful – she could squeeze through narrow spaces between the rocks.

When she finally reached the top of the cliffs, Milky couldn't believe her eyes. Hundreds and hundreds of puffins covered the rocky ledges! These funny birds had bright orange beaks and feet, black and white feathers, and the most serious expressions on their faces.

"Well, hello there, little one," said a puffin named Pippa. "We don't often see dogs up here on our cliffs."

"I'm Milky!" she said, her tail wagging so hard she almost lost her balance on the narrow ledge. "I wanted to meet all the animals in Iceland, and a horse named Frost told me you live here."

The puffins were delighted to meet such a friendly visitor. They told Milky all about their lives on the cliffs, how they caught fish in their colorful beaks, and how they raised their babies in cozy burrows dug into the grassy clifftops.

But suddenly, the weather began to change. Dark clouds rolled in from the ocean, and the wind started to blow very hard. "A storm is coming!" called Pippa. "You need to get back to safety, little Milky!"

The problem was, the path down the cliff had become slippery from the ocean spray, and the wind was so strong that Milky could barely walk. She tried to start down the path, but a big swirl of wind almost blew her right off the cliff!

"Don't worry, Milky!" called Pippa. "We'll help you!"

The puffins came up with a clever plan. Since they were excellent flyers, they could guide Milky down the safest parts of the path. Pippa flew just ahead of Milky, showing her where to step, while other puffins flew alongside her to block some of the wind with their wings.

It was scary, but also exciting! Milky felt like she was flying too, surrounded by her new puffin friends. Step by step, they made their way down the cliff. When the path got too steep, the puffins found a series of small caves where Milky could rest and catch her breath.

Finally, they reached the bottom of the cliff just as the storm really began. The puffins led Milky to a large cave where she could stay dry and warm. They shared their fish with her (though Milky explained that she preferred dog food), and they all huddled together until the storm passed.

When morning came, the storm had cleared, and everything looked fresh and clean. Milky's family had been looking for her all night, and they were so relieved when they found her safe in the cave with her new puffin friends.

"Thank you for taking care of me," Milky said to the puffins. "You're the bravest and kindest birds I've ever met!"

"And you're the most adventurous little dog we've ever met!" laughed Pippa.

As Milky's family drove back to their hotel, Milky looked out at the beautiful Icelandic land and smiled. She had made new friends, seen amazing sights, and had the most exciting adventure of her life. She couldn't wait to tell all the animals back home about the wonderful horses, puffins, and all the other creatures that called Iceland home.

And as they drove past a field of those beautiful Icelandic horses, Milky saw Frost and barked a happy goodbye. Her Iceland adventure had been everything she had dreamed of and more!

From that day on, whenever Milky met other dogs and told them about her travels, she would always say, "The best adventures happen when you're brave enough to make new friends and help each other when times get tough."

And she was absolutely right.

It is Christmas time and Milky has gone to visit the white Polar Bear. Milky is looking at the lovely Christmas tree and all the presents. What do you think Milky and the Polar Bear will say to each other. Write your answer here:

Milky's Fun Fact

Polar bears are incredible swimmers and can hold their breath underwater! Polar bears can swim for hours and hold their breath for up to 2 minutes while diving for food. Their big paws work like paddles, and they can swim over 60 miles without stopping. They even have a clear extra eyelid that works like swimming goggles!

Baby polar bears are tiny when they're born. Cubs are only about the size of a guinea pig when born - smaller than most human babies! They're born blind and helpless, and stay in their cozy snow den with mom for several months before they're big enough to venture outside.

Their paws are like built-in snowshoes and ice grippers! Polar bear paws can be up to 12 inches wide to spread out their weight on thin ice, and they have rough bumps and fur between their toes that work like tire treads to keep them from slipping on ice. It's like they're wearing the perfect winter boots all the time!

Find the difference
Level: Tricky
Number of differences : 10

Find the difference
Level: Simple
Number of differences: 5

"We made this coloring page of Milky especially for you! We can't wait to see how amazing it will look when you color it in."

Two Dogs Waiting for Santa

Milky and Belle sat by the tree so bright,
Their tails were wagging with pure delight.
They'd been so good throughout the year,
Now Christmas Eve was finally here.

They watched the window, ears alert,
For sleigh bell sounds through snow and dirt.
Their stockings hung with extra care,
Filled with dreams of treats to share.

The fire crackled warm and low,
While outside danced the winter snow.
Two furry friends with hopeful hearts,
Waiting for the night to start.

When morning came with Christmas cheer,
They found their gifts were finally here.
New squeaky toys and bones galore,
Santa loved them more and more!

Milky's Fun Facts

Dogs have super noses! A dog's sense of smell is about 10,000 to 100,000 times stronger than ours. They can smell things we can't even imagine, like when you've been petting another dog or what you had for lunch hours ago.

Dogs sweat through their paws. While humans sweat all over their bodies, dogs only have sweat glands in their paw pads. That's why they pant with their tongues out when they're hot - it's their main way of cooling down.

Every dog's nose print is unique, just like human fingerprints. No two dogs have the same nose pattern, and some people even use nose prints to identify lost pets.

Dogs can learn hundreds of words. The smartest dogs can understand around 200-300 words and can even do basic math. Some dogs know the names of dozens of different toys and can fetch exactly the one you ask for.

Penguin and Milky's Christmas Party

Penguin waddled through the snow,
With his tuxedo all aglow,
Milky the dog wagged his tail,
"Let's go party without fail!"

They slipped and slid down snowy hills,
Giving everyone winter thrills,
Penguin's flippers helped him glide,
While Milky barked with puppy pride.

At the party, lights so bright,
Filled the room with Christmas light,
Penguin danced on webbed orange feet,
While Milky found some tasty treats.

Santa laughed and clapped his hands,
"Best of friends from different lands!"
Penguin shared his fishy snacks,
Milky gave some doggy tracks.

When the party came to end,
Penguin and his doggy friend,
Curled up by the Christmas tree,
Happy as two friends can be.

Milky's Fun Facts

Penguins are like nature's comedians! They waddle when they walk because their legs are set far back on their bodies, which makes them look like they're wearing fancy tuxedos and trying not to trip.

Baby penguins are super fluffy and gray - they look completely different from their parents! The fluffy feathers keep them warm like a cozy winter coat until they grow their waterproof adult feathers.

Penguins are amazing swimmers who can "fly" underwater! They flap their wings just like birds in the air, but they zoom through the ocean instead. Some penguins can swim as fast as a car.

Penguins have a special gland that works like built-in goggles, helping them see clearly underwater when they're hunting for fish.

Milky's Australian Bush Adventure

Milky's human mum was from Australia, and she had the most wonderful accent that made everything sound like a song. "G'day, Milky!" she would say every morning, and Milky would wag her fluffy white tail with joy. When Mum said they were going to visit her homeland, Milky could hardly contain her excitement.

"We're going to see my old friend Billy in the Australian bush," Mum explained. "You'll meet animals you've never seen before, little one!"

After the longest airplane ride ever, Milky stepped off the plane into the warm Australian sunshine. Everything felt different – the air was hot and dry, and there were strange new smells everywhere. They drove for hours through red dusty roads until they reached Billy's house, where the land stretched as far as Milky could see.

Billy was a kind Aboriginal man with twinkling eyes and the biggest smile. "Welcome to country, little Milky," he said, gently patting her head. "This land has been home to my people for thousands and thousands of years. Every rock, every tree, every animal has a story."

That first evening, as the sun painted the sky orange and pink, Billy told them stories around a campfire. "The Aboriginal people have always lived alongside the animals here," he explained. "We know all their ways and their songs."

Milky was fascinated, but she was even more excited about meeting these mysterious Australian animals. She didn't have to wait long.

The next morning, Milky woke up to the strangest sound – "Kookaburra-ha-ha-ha-ha!" A big bird was laughing in the tree above their tent! Billy chuckled. "That's Kenny the kookaburra. He's saying good morning!"

As they walked through the bush, Milky's nose twitched with all the new scents. Suddenly, she spotted something incredible – a mob of kangaroos bouncing across the red dirt! Milky had never seen anything like it. The kangaroos moved in the most amazing way, springing forward on their powerful legs with their babies peeking out of their pouches.

"Crikey!" said the biggest kangaroo, whose name was Ruby. "What kind of tiny, fluffy creature are you?"

"I'm Milky!" she barked happily. "I love making friends with animals!"

Ruby laughed and showed Milky how kangaroos hop. Milky tried to copy them, bouncing on her little legs, which made all the kangaroos chuckle. The baby kangaroo joey in Ruby's pouch thought Milky was the funniest thing he'd ever seen.

But their fun was interrupted by Billy calling, "Milky! Come quickly! I want to show you something special!"

Billy led them to a waterhole where the most extraordinary animals were drinking. There were emus – birds taller than Milky's mum but couldn't fly – with fluffy feathers and long necks. They made deep booming sounds that rumbled in Milky's chest.

"And look up there," Billy pointed to a eucalyptus tree.

Milky gasped. Clinging to the branches was the most adorable gray creature with big round ears and a black nose. "That's Benny the koala," Billy said. "He's having his afternoon nap."

But the most amazing surprise came when Billy showed them some ancient rock paintings on a cliff face. "My great grandparents painted these stories thousands of years ago," he said proudly. The paintings showed all kinds of animals – kangaroos, emus, and even some strange creatures that looked like they had duck bills!

"Those are echidnas," Billy explained. "Very shy creatures with spines like a hedgehog."

As if by magic, just as he said it, a real echidna waddled out from behind a rock! Its name was Spike, and he was covered in sharp quills but had the gentlest eyes. "Don't worry," Spike said to Milky. "My spines only go up when I'm scared, and you seem very friendly!"

That afternoon, while exploring near a billabong (which Billy explained was an Australian word for a water hole), Milky heard the most beautiful bird song she'd ever heard. Following the sound, she discovered a lyrebird named Luna, who could copy any sound she heard.

"Woof woof!" Luna sang, perfectly copying Milky's bark.

"Ring ring!" she continued, sounding exactly like Mum's phone.

"Kookaburra-ha-ha-ha!" she laughed, just like Kenny.

Milky was so amazed that she started barking excitedly, and Luna copied every single bark!

But the real adventure began when a sudden dust storm started brewing on the horizon. Billy looked worried. "That's a big one coming," he said. "We need to get back to the home quickly."

As they hurried across the bush, the wind began to blow harder and harder. Red dust swirled everywhere, making it hard to see. Suddenly, Milky realized she couldn't see Billy or her mum anymore!

"Help!" she barked, but the wind was so loud she could barely hear her own voice.

Just when Milky was getting scared, she heard a familiar laughing call. "Kookaburra-ha-ha-ha!" It was Kenny! The clever bird flew low, guiding Milky toward a large rock formation.

Behind the rocks, Milky found the most amazing sight. All her new animal friends had gathered together – Ruby the kangaroo, Benny the koala, Spike the echidna, and Luna the lyrebird. They had created a safe shelter from the storm!

"Animals in the bush always help each other during storms," Ruby explained, keeping Milky warm under her strong arms.

Luna used her amazing voice to call out in perfect copies of Billy's voice and Mum's voice, helping them find where Milky was hiding. When the dust settled, Billy and Mum found them all huddled together, safe and sound.

"You clever animals!" Billy said, smiling proudly. "Looking after our little visitor just like family."

That night, as they sat around the campfire again, Billy told Milky more stories about how the Aboriginal people and the animals had always been connected. "Every creature has something to teach us," he said. "The kangaroo teaches us about caring for our young, the kookaburra teaches us about laughter, and the echidna teaches us about being gentle but strong."

As Milky curled up under the bright Australian stars, listening to the sounds of the bush all around her, she felt incredibly happy. She had made wonderful new friends, learned about a different way of life, and discovered that no matter where you are in the world, kindness and friendship are the same everywhere.

"Thanks for the adventure, Australia," she whispered, and somewhere in the distance, Kenny the kookaburra laughed his approval.

Milky Waits for Bruno Bull

Little Milky sat and waited,
While big Bruno Bull got bathed.
"Hurry up!" barked Milky small,
"We'll be late to Christmas Ball!"

"Bruno scrubbed behind each ear,
Polished horns till crystal clear.
"Must look handsome," Bruno said,
"For the cows in Christmas red!"

In the mud he'd rolled around,
Now he's washing, pound by pound.
Milky tapped his tiny paws,
"Bruno, please don't primp and pause!"

Bruno brushed his coat so neat,
Cleaned the mud from giant feet.
"Daisy Cow will surely swoon,
When she sees me 'neath the moon!"

Finally Bruno looked just right,
Shining in the Christmas light.
Off they went, both big and small,
To the merry Christmas Ball!

Milky's Fun Facts

Bulls don't actually hate the color red - they're colorblind to red and green! When a matador waves a red cape, the bull is charging at the movement, not the color.

Bulls have best friends and get sad when separated - bulls are actually gentle giants who form close friendships with other bulls. They'll hang out together, groom each other, and even play games. If you separate best friend bulls, they can get stressed and lonely, just like kids do!

A bull's nose print is unique, just like a human fingerprint - every bull has a different pattern of ridges and lines on their nose. Farmers sometimes use nose prints to identify their bulls, the same way police use fingerprints to identify people!

This is for you to create your own story. Look at the picture and try and imagine what Milky and the Turtle are talking about and write your answer here:

Milky's Fun Fact

Turtles are ancient survivors! They've been around for over 200 million years - that means they lived alongside the dinosaurs and outlasted them. Some turtle species today look almost exactly like their prehistoric ancestors.

They can live incredibly long lives. Some giant tortoises live over 150 years old! There are tortoises alive today that were around when your great-great-great grandparents were kids.

Sea turtles are amazing navigators. Baby sea turtles use the Earth's magnetic field like a built-in GPS to find their way across thousands of miles of ocean. They can return to the exact beach where they were born decades later to lay their own eggs.

Color Milky and her Friends

Elephant and Milky's Christmas Journey Home

Through dusty trails and desert sand,
Across the wide and open land,
Big Elephant and Milky stride,
With Christmas joy they cannot hide.

The elephant's trunk swings to and fro,
Catching seeds where wildgrass grow,
While Milky trots through grasses tall,
His tail wagging through it all.

"Home for Christmas!" Milky barks,
As twilight falls and daylight parks,
The elephant trumpets soft and low,
"Let's find the path that leads us home!"

The desert stars begin to shine,
Christmas scent smells just fine,
A distant light cuts through the night,
Guiding them with gentle sight.

At last they see their little home,
No more need for them to roam,
Big Elephant and faithful friend,
Their Christmas journey's at an end.

Milky's Fun Facts

Elephants really do have incredible memories - they can recognize other elephants they haven't seen for decades and remember drought locations from years past. Their "elephant memory" isn't just a saying!

An elephant's trunk has over 40,000 muscles (humans have about 600 muscles in our entire body). They can use it like a snorkel when swimming, a hand to grab things as small as a single blade of grass, or a powerful hose.

Elephants communicate through infrasonic calls - sounds too low for humans to hear. These rumbles can travel for miles and help herds coordinate across vast distances.

Despite weighing several tons, elephants are afraid of bees.

Milky's Island Adventure

Milky loved exploring, but she had never been on a real island adventure before. So Milky's human mother announced they were taking her with them on the ferry to Texel, a small island off the Dutch coast, Milky's spotted tail wagged so fast it looked like a fuzzy blur!

"We're going to spend the whole day exploring, Milky," Linda said, clipping on her special red leash. "But you must promise to stay close. Islands can be tricky places for little dogs who love to wander."

Milky barked her agreement, though her mind was already racing with excitement about all the new smells and friends she might discover.

The ferry ride was magical. Milky pressed her black nose against the window, watching the waves dance and seagulls swoop alongside the boat. Her white patches seemed to shimmer in the sea breeze as she sniffed the salty air.

When they arrived on Texel, Milky's paws touched sand for the very first time. "Oh my!" she woofed with delight. The tiny grains felt tickly and warm between her toes. She immediately started digging, sending sand flying in all directions until Linda laughed and guided her toward the dunes.

As they walked along the beach path, Milky's keen nose picked up an unusual scent. Following it with her typical dachshund determination, she spotted something extraordinary—a baby seal pup sitting alone on the rocks, looking very sad indeed.

"Hello there," Milky called gently, remembering her manners. "I'm Milky. Why do you look so worried?"

The little seal pup sniffled. "I'm Luna. I was playing with my friends when a big wave carried me away from our usual spot. Now I can't find my way back to my family!"

Milky's heart melted. She had traveled from South Africa to the Netherlands and knew exactly how scary it felt to be lost. "Don't worry, Luna! I'm excellent at finding things. My long nose is very good at following scents."

Linda noticed Milky had stopped and was making her special "I'm talking to a new friend" sounds. She smiled and sat on a nearby rock, giving Milky space for her latest adventure.

"Can you smell where your family might be?" Milky asked Luna.

Luna sniffed the air carefully. "Yes! I can smell fish and... and my mama's special scent. It's coming from over there!" She pointed her flipper toward some rocks further down the beach.

"Perfect!" Milky announced. "Follow me!"

The little dachshund led the way, her short legs working extra hard in the soft sand. Luna flopped along beside her, and together they made quite a pair—the spotted dog and the silvery seal pup.

As they rounded a corner, they heard joyful barking sounds—but not from dogs! A whole group of seals was calling out, and Luna's eyes lit up like Christmas morning.

"Mama! Papa!" Luna called back, flapping her flippers excitedly.

A large mother seal slid down from the rocks and nuzzled her baby.
"Luna! We've been so worried. How did you find your way back?"

"This is Milky," Luna said proudly. "She helped me follow my nose home, just like she learned to do when she traveled all the way from Africa!"

The seal family gathered around Milky, thanking her with gentle nudges and happy seal songs. Milky felt her chest puff up with pride—her piebald markings seemed to glow even brighter in the island sunshine.

"You know," said Luna's father, "you're always welcome on our island, little spotted friend. Not many land animals are brave enough to help sea creatures."

"And you're very smart too," added Luna. "Maybe you could be an honorary island seal!"

Milky giggled at the idea. "I'd love that! But I think my short legs might not work very well in deep water."

Just then, Linda called from down the beach. "Milky! Time to explore more of the island!"

"I have to go," Milky said to her new friends. "But I'll never forget our adventure!"

"Neither will we," Luna promised. "And if you ever come back to Texel, you know where to find us!"

As Milky trotted back to Linda, her paws left little spotted-dog prints in the sand alongside the flipper marks of her seal friends. She had learned something wonderful that day—adventures were always better when you used them to help others.

That evening on the ferry ride home, Milky curled up in Linda's lap, tired but happy. The island had given her a brand new kind of adventure, and she had made friends with creatures she'd only seen in picture books before.

"You've had quite a day, haven't you, my little explorer?" Linda whispered, scratching behind Milky's ears.

Milky's tail gave one sleepy wag. Tomorrow would bring new adventures back home in Rotterdam, but tonight she would dream of island beaches, friendly seals, and the wonderful feeling of helping someone find their way home—just like she had found her own way to the perfect family who loved her spots and her adventurous spirit.

The island had been magical, but the best part was knowing that wherever her travels took her, there were always new friends waiting to be made and new ways to spread kindness across the world.

Hey little buddy,
I can see
Santa's sleigh coming from way up here - he's got presents for you!

Great! I have been waiting
here for days,
so thanks for the tip.

Christmas with Giraffe and Milky

On Christmas Eve when stars were bright,
A giraffe stood tall in the moonlight,
His spotted neck reached toward the sky,
While little Milky trotted by.

"Hello up there!" sweet Milky called,
"You're the tallest friend I've ever known at all!
Can you see Santa from way up high?
Is he flying somewhere in the sky?"

Giraffe looked down with gentle eyes,
"Dear Milky, yes! What a surprise!
I see his sleigh beyond the trees,
Dancing on the Christmas breeze!"

"But tell me, friend so small and sweet,
What's Christmas like down by your feet?
I see the world from way up here,
But wonder what you hold most dear."

Little Milky wagged her tail,
"Down here I smell each Christmas tale!
The cookies baking, pine tree scent,
And all the love that's being sent!"

Milky's Fun Facts

A giraffe's heart is as big as a basketball and weighs 25 pounds! It has to be huge to pump blood all the way up their long neck to their brain.

Every giraffe has different spots, just like people have different fingerprints! No two giraffes look exactly the same.

Even though giraffes are huge, they're very gentle and quiet animals. They hardly ever make any noise - they mostly just hum very softly to each other!

Giraffes only sleep for 30 minutes to 2 hours each day! And when they do sleep, they often sleep standing up!

Can you match the baby and adult?

A Challenge

Lamb	Goat
Kid	Pig
Foal	Sheep
Kitten	Bear
Calf	Horse
Chick	Duck
Puppy	Cat
Duckling	Chicken
Piglet	Cow
Cub	Dog

Extra Hard

Fry	Jellyfish
Spat	Frog
Tadpole	Hare
Elver	Seal
Pup	Whale
Ephyra	Oyster
Calf	Swan
Fingerling	Eel
Leveret	Fish
Cygnets	Salmon

It is Christmas time and Milky is having a rest with her friend, the Monkey. What do you think Milky and the Monkey are talking about? Put your answer here:

Milky's Fun Fact

Monkeys have their own "languages" and accents! Different groups of the same monkey species can have different calls and sounds, just like how people from different places have different accents. Baby monkeys even learn their group's special calls from their parents, kind of like how you learn to speak your family's language.

They use tools just like humans do! Some monkeys use sticks to fish termites out of holes, stones to crack open nuts, and leaves as sponges to soak up water. Capuchin monkeys even rub themselves with certain plants that work like bug spray to keep mosquitoes away!

Spider monkeys don't have thumbs! Unlike most primates, spider monkeys have four long fingers but no thumbs on their hands. This actually makes them better at swinging through trees because their hands work like perfect hooks to grab branches.

Red Fox and Milky's Christmas Adventure

Little red fox brushed his fur so bright,
Put on a bow tie, red and white,
Milky the dog jumped up and down,
"You look fancy for Christmas town!"

Fox wore tiny boots upon his paws,
'And a festive hat with Santa's clause,
His bushy tail had ribbons green,
The smartest fox you've ever seen!"

Come on, Milky!" Fox did say,
"Let's go party Christmas Day!"
Through the snow they ran together,
Friends forever in winter weather.

At the party, Fox looked grand,
Dancing with his paw in hand,
Milky barked a Christmas song,
All the animals sang along.

Home they went through starlit night,
Fox still dressed up fancy-bright,
Milky yawned and wagged his tail,
"Best Christmas party without fail!"

Milky's Fun Facts

Red foxes are basically nature's furry little detectives with super-powered hearing. They can hear a mouse squeaking from 100 feet away - that's like hearing a whisper from across a football field!

When hunting in snow, foxes tilt their heads side to side like they're listening to music, then leap and dive headfirst into the snow.

Baby foxes are called kits and they're born with blue eyes that change to golden yellow as they grow up, just like magic!

Foxes have over 40 different sounds they make to talk to each other, including barks, screams, and chattering like they're having conversations.

Milky's African Adventure

Long before Milky became famous in Rotterdam for her canal adventures, she was just a tiny puppy living under the bright African sun in South Africa. Even then, her beautiful piebald coat with its white patches scattered across tan fur made her stand out from her brothers and sisters.

Milky lived with her dog family on a small farm near the edge of the African bush. Her human family, were wildlife researchers who studied the amazing animals that lived in the area. Every morning, young Milky would wake up to the most incredible sounds—lions roaring in the distance, elephants trumpeting, and hundreds of birds singing their dawn songs.

One particularly hot day, when Milky was about four months old, she decided to explore further than ever before. Her short legs carried her past the vegetable garden, beyond the chicken coop, and toward the big trees that was at the beginning of the wild bush.

"I wonder what's out there," Milky thought, her spotted tail wagging with curiosity. The smells were unlike anything she'd ever smelled—wild and exciting and full of mystery.

As she sniffed around the base of a large tree, Milky heard a tiny squeaking sound. Looking up, she saw the most unusual creature she'd ever encountered. It looked like a tiny person with huge eyes and a long, fluffy tail!

"Oh my!" squeaked the little creature. "You're the most colorful dog I've ever seen! Are those white spots real?"

Milky giggled. "Yes, they're real! I'm what's called a piebald dachshund. My spots make me special. But what are you? I've never seen anything like you before!"

"I'm Kesi, a bushbaby!" the little primate said proudly. "We're also called galagos. We're nocturnal, which means we sleep during the day and play at night. But I couldn't sleep because I'm worried about my little brother, Jengo."

"What's wrong with Jengo?" Milky asked, immediately concerned.

Kesi's big eyes filled with tears. "He was practicing his jumping yesterday evening—we bushbabies are excellent jumpers, you know—but he landed badly and hurt his leg. Now he's stuck in a tree and too scared to come down. Our mama went to find help, but she's been gone all day."

Milky's heart went out to her new friend. Even though she was far from home, she knew she had to help. "Show me where Jengo is! Maybe we can figure out a solution together."

Kesi led Milky deeper into the bush, chattering excitedly about bushbaby life. "Did you know we can jump over six feet in a single leap? That's like you jumping the length of three cars! And our hands are so good at gripping that we can hang upside down from branches."

They soon reached a tall marula tree where another little bushbaby sat on a high branch, looking miserable and scared.

"Jengo!" Kesi called. "I brought help! This is Milky—she's a special spotted dog who wants to help you get down."

Jengo looked down nervously. "But I can't jump with my hurt leg, and the branches are too far apart for me to climb down slowly."

Milky studied the problem carefully. Her long body and clever mind were perfect for solving tricky situations. "I have an idea!" she announced.

"Jengo, can you see that thick branch that's lower down? The one that's closer to the trunk?"

"Yes," Jengo replied.

"If you could get to that branch, could you slide down the trunk like a fireman's pole?"

Jengo perked up. "I think so! But how do I get to that branch?"

Milky wagged her tail. "I'm going to create a bridge for you!" She began gathering long, sturdy sticks in her mouth, piling them at the base of the tree.

Just then, they heard a deep rumbling sound. All three friends froze. Through the trees came the most magnificent sight—a family of elephants walking slowly toward the watering hole!

"Don't worry," whispered Kesi. "Elephants are gentle giants. They won't hurt us if we stay calm and quiet."

The largest elephant, a wise-looking grandmother, noticed the little group and approached slowly. She examined the situation with her intelligent eyes, then did something amazing. Using her trunk, she carefully lifted the pile of sticks Milky had gathered and arranged them into a perfect bridge between the low branch and the trunk!

"Thank you, great elephant!" Milky barked gratefully.

The elephant grandmother trumpeted softly, as if to say "you're welcome," then continued on her way with her family.

Jengo carefully made his way across the stick bridge and slid safely down the trunk into his brother's arms. "You saved me, Milky! And you too, grandmother elephant!"

Just then, they heard Mama Bushbaby calling from nearby. She had returned with Dr. Johnson, Milky's human friend, who had been searching everywhere for his adventurous puppy!

"There you are, Milky!" Dr. Johnson laughed. "I should have known you'd be making new friends and helping solve problems."

Mama Bushbaby examined Jengo's leg and was relieved to find it was only bruised, not broken. "Thank you, little spotted dog," she said to Milky. "You've shown great kindness to my family."

As Dr. Johnson carried Milky back home, she felt proud of her African adventure. She had learned about bushbabies and their amazing jumping abilities, discovered that elephants were not only huge but incredibly smart and helpful, and most importantly, she had made two wonderful friends.

That evening, as the African sunset painted the sky in brilliant oranges and purples, Milky curled up with her dog family. She could hear Kesi and Jengo playing safely in the trees nearby, their happy chatter mixing with the evening sounds of the African bush.

"Africa is amazing," Milky thought sleepily. "There's so much to learn and so many friends to make." Little did she know that this was just the beginning of a lifetime of adventures that would take her around the world, but she would always remember her first big adventure helping her bushbaby friends under the wide African sky.

The spotted little dog fell asleep dreaming of elephant bridges and bushbaby jumps, already planning her next exploration of the wonderful continent she was lucky enough to call her first home.

Milky's Animal Word Search

D	M	O	C	T	O	P	U	S	W
O	O	A	W	S	F	B	A	R	C
G	O	B	W	C	C		D	R	T
O	P	E	N	G	U	I	N	E	H
P	I	C	S	G	V	Z	F	D	E
G	I	R	A	F	F	E	D	S	H
D	M	F	S	F	T	B	F	D	O
S	F	I	S	H	Y	R	R	O	L
N	N	E	S	J	Y	A	T	L	F
A	K	F	F	K	G	T	Y	P	V
I	X	G	L	L	H	U	H	H	B
L	D	I	A	I	B	N	A	I	Q
S	M	H	S	H	A	R	K	N	S
F	W	I	N	O	N	R	E	F	V
S	L	J	M	Q	U	A	I	R	H
C	S	Y	T	W	I	B	O	E	U
V	S	A	R	S	J	B	U	E	J
C	O	K	U	Z	K	I	L	D	N
G	F	L	I	X	M	T	I	E	G
S	V	B	U	E	N	M	N	S	O
A	K	C	C	A	T	M	D	R	A
D	J	D	J	R	O	K	E	O	G
F	J	D	G	D	P	L	H	H	T
G	E	L	E	P	H	A	N	T	S

Words: Milky, dog, cat, penguin, rabbit, dolphin, goat, horse, fish, crab, elephant, giraffe, fly, shark, octopus, snail, zebra

R	B	E	A	R
A	W	F	G	H
T	D	I	S	H
T	O	H	S	J
W	G	I	V	R
D	F	D	F	A
M	I	L	K	Y
D	U	G	S	L

Milky, dog, bear, frog, rat, fish

Hey Milky, are you sure I don't need to put my Christmas coat on also?

It's ok little Piggy. Many of the farm animals won't be dressed up. You look great in your Christmas hat.

Little Pig and Milky's Farm Christmas Party

Little pig put on his bow,
Milky wagged from head to toe,
"Christmas party at the barn!"
They ran fast across the farm.

Cow wore bells around her neck,
Sheep had ribbons, what the heck!
Horse had tinsel in his mane,
Chickens clucked a sweet refrain

Pig and Milky danced around,
Hooves and paws upon the ground,
Duck splashed in her water bowl,
Goat was munching Christmas coal!W

When the party came to end,
Every animal was a friend,
Pig and Milky, tired but glad,
Best Christmas party they ever had!

Milky's Fun Facts

Pigs are super smart and can learn their names, play video games with joysticks, and even learn tricks faster than dogs!

Pigs don't actually sweat much, so they roll in mud to stay cool - the mud works like natural sunscreen and air conditioning!

Baby pigs are called piglets and they have their own special sleeping spots, plus they recognize their mom's voice from other pig moms!

Pigs have an amazing sense of smell that's 2,000 times better than humans - they can even find truffles buried deep underground!

Fill in the blank - for the young ones!

1. Santa Claus wears a red _____ and has a big white beard.
2. Rudolph the reindeer has a shiny red _____.
3. Children hang Christmas _____ by the fireplace for Santa to fill.
4. We put colorful _____ under the Christmas tree.
5. Santa's sleigh is pulled by nine _____.
6. We decorate the Christmas _____ with lights and ornaments.
7. Santa lives at the _____ Pole where it's very cold.
8. Children leave milk and _____ for Santa on Christmas Eve.
9. We build a _____ in the yard using three big snowballs.
10. On Christmas morning, families open their _____ together.

Word Bank for younger children: presents/gifts, nose, reindeer, tree, stockings, suit, cookies, North, snowman, presents/gifts

Fill in the blank - more Challenging!

(No word bank)

- 1 The three wise men followed a bright _____ to find baby Jesus in Bethlehem.
- 2 Santa checks his list _____ to see who's been naughty or nice.
- 3 People hang a _____ on their front door to welcome Christmas visitors.
- 4 The night before Christmas is called Christmas _____.
- 5 In the song "The Twelve Days of Christmas," on the first day my true love gave to me a _____ in a pear tree.
- 6 We roast _____ on an open fire, just like in the Christmas song.
- 7 Santa's workshop is located in the _____ Pole, not the South Pole.
- 8 The red and white striped Christmas candy shaped like a shepherd's staff is called a candy _____.
- 9 In many countries, children put their _____ by the fireplace hoping Santa will fill them with treats.
- 10 The plant with red berries and prickly green leaves that people use for Christmas decorating is called _____.

Milky and the Magic Butterfly

A butterfly so clear and bright,
Landed on Milky with delight.
"Dear puppy, would you take me out?
I'd love to see what Christmas is about!"

"Hop on my back," said Milky sweet,
"We'll trot around on little feet.
Together we will roam the night,
To see each twinkling Christmas light!

"Through streets they went, what a sight!
Red, and gold lights burning bright.
The butterfly's wings caught each glow,
Like tiny rainbows in the snow.

"Thank you, Milky!" butterfly said,
"This magical ride filled my head
With memories of lights so grand,
The most beautiful in all the land!"

Milky's Fun Facts

Translucent butterflies are nature's invisible ninjas! Their see-through wings make them super hard for birds and other predators to spot when they're flying around flowers or resting on leaves. It's like they have a built-in invisibility cloak!

Even though their wings look completely clear, they still shimmer and sparkle in the sunlight! The tiny structures on their wings can create beautiful rainbow colors that dance and change as they flutter by.

When translucent butterflies land on colorful flowers or leaves, they almost disappear completely! Their clear wings let the colors underneath show through, making them blend in perfectly with whatever they're sitting on. It's like they become part of the flower itself!

Find the difference
Level: Tricky
Number of differences : 10

Find the difference
Level: Simple
Number of differences: 5

Christmas with Kangaroo and Milky

On Christmas Eve when snow was bright,
A kangaroo hopped into sight,
With Santa hat upon his head,
And gift-filled pouch of green and red.

Little Milky heard the sound,
Of bouncing paws upon the ground,
She peeked outside with sleepy eyes,
"A hopping Santa!" came her cries.

"G'day there, Milky!" Roo called out,
"I've traveled here by bounce, no doubt!
From Australia's sunny shore,
To bring you gifts and so much more!"

"Thank you, Roo!" she barked with glee,
"You're the best Santa there could be!
Though different from the tales they tell,
You've made this Christmas turn out well!"

Now every year when Christmas nears,
Little Milky holds back tears,
Remembering her bouncing friend,
And hoping he'll come back again.

Milky's Fun Facts

Australia has more kangaroos than people! There are about 50 million kangaroos hopping around Australia, but only about 26 million people living there. So the kangaroos outnumber the people 2 to 1!

Kangaroos only live wild in Australia and nowhere else in the whole world! Australia is the only place where you can see kangaroos hopping free in nature.

"In Australia, kangaroos hop around freely in the wild, just like squirrels do in other countries. Kids in Australia might see kangaroos on their way to school, especially if they live in the countryside."

Milky's Turkish Adventure

After settling into her new life in the Netherlands with her loving human mum Linda, Milky thought her traveling days might be over. But Linda had a wonderful surprise planned! One morning, she pulled out a bright blue suitcase and started packing colorful clothes.

"Guess what, Milky?" Linda said excitedly. "We're going on the adventure of a lifetime! We're flying to Turkey for two whole weeks!"

Milky's spotted tail wagged so hard her whole body wiggled. She had heard Linda talking about Turkey on the phone—something about ancient castles, hot air balloons, and the most delicious food in the world. But best of all, Linda had told her that Turkish people absolutely loved dogs!

The airplane ride was Milky's first time flying, and she was amazed by how tiny everything looked from up in the clouds. Linda held her special travel carrier by the window so Milky could watch the world shrink below them.

When they landed in Istanbul, Milky's nose was immediately filled with the most incredible smells—spices she'd never encountered, grilled meats, fresh bread, and something sweet and floral that made her tail wag with anticipation.

Their first adventure began right away. As they walked through the bustling Grand Bazaar, everyone stopped to admire Milky's beautiful piebald coat. "Çok güzel köpek!" called out Mehmet, a friendly carpet seller. Linda explained this meant "very beautiful dog" in Turkish, and Milky preened with pride.

"She's traveled all the way from Africa to the Netherlands, and now to Turkey!" Linda told Mehmet in English.

Mehmet's eyes lit up. "A world traveler! Just like the ancient traders who used to come through Istanbul. She brings good luck, I think!" He offered Milky a small piece of plain bread, which she accepted graciously.

Their next stop was Cappadocia, a magical region famous for its fairy chimneys—tall, cone-shaped rock formations that looked like something from a fairy tale. Linda had booked them a special hot air balloon ride at sunrise, and Milky would be the first dog passenger their balloon company had ever taken!

Early the next morning, as the sun painted the sky in shades of pink and gold, Milky found herself in a wicker basket floating high above the most amazing landscape she'd ever seen. Below them, hundreds of other colorful balloons drifted like gentle clouds, and the fairy chimneys stretched as far as she could see.

"Look, Milky!" Linda pointed to some caves carved into the rocks. "People lived in those caves thousands of years ago!"

Suddenly, their balloon pilot, Captain Emre, pointed excitedly toward the ground. "Look there! Wild horses!"

Far below, a small herd of beautiful horses was galloping freely across the valley. Milky barked with delight—even from high in the sky, she wanted to make friends with these magnificent creatures.

After landing safely, Captain Emre surprised them both. "Your little dog is very brave," he said to Linda. "Most dogs would be scared to fly so high, but she loved every minute! She's earned a special Turkish name—we'll call her 'Cesur,' which means 'brave one.'"

Their adventure continued when they visited Pamukkale, famous for its white terraced pools filled with warm, mineral-rich water. Linda and Milky walked carefully along the white limestone terraces that looked like frozen waterfalls.

As they explored, they met Ayşe, a young Turkish girl about eight years old, who was visiting with her grandmother. When Ayşe saw Milky's spots, she clapped her hands with joy.

"Büyükanne, look! This dog has spots like the ones in my favorite story!" she called to her grandmother in Turkish, then switched to careful English for

Linda and Milky. "My grandmother tells me stories about a magical spotted dog who brings happiness wherever she goes."

Büyükanne, a kind woman with twinkling eyes, smiled warmly at Milky. She spoke softly in Turkish to Ayşe, who translated excitedly: "Büyükanne says your dog has a special spirit. She can tell she's traveled far and made many friends."

But the most exciting part of their adventure happened at the ancient ruins of Ephesus. As Linda and Milky explored the marble streets where Roman emperors once walked, they heard a distressed mewing sound coming from behind some fallen columns.

Following the sound with her excellent hearing, Milky discovered a small kitten who had wandered away from his family and gotten trapped behind some rocks.

"Merhaba, little kitten," Milky said gently, using one of the Turkish words Linda had taught her. "Don't be scared. I'm here to help."

The kitten mewed pitifully. He was too small to climb over the rocks, and the gap was too narrow for Linda to reach through.

But Milky had an idea! Her long, sausage-shaped body was perfect for squeezing into small spaces. Carefully, she wiggled through the gap and gently nudged the kitten toward a lower opening where Linda could safely lift him out.

A crowd had gathered to watch, and when the kitten was safely rescued, everyone cheered! "Aferin Cesur!" called out several people, which Captain Emre had taught them meant "Well done, brave one!"

Just then, a worried-looking woman came running up—it was the kitten's owner, Zeynep, who worked at the archaeological site. When she saw her kitten safe and sound, tears of relief filled her eyes.

"Teşekkür ederim!" she said to Milky, covering her spotted head with gentle kisses. "Thank you, beautiful dog!"

That evening at their hotel, Linda brushed Milky's coat as they watched the sunset over the Mediterranean Sea. "You've made so many friends in Turkey, Cesur," Linda said, using Milky's new Turkish name. "And you've shown everyone that kindness doesn't need words to be understood."

Milky curled up happily in Linda's lap, thinking about all her Turkish adventures. She had floated in a hot air balloon above fairy chimneys, walked on ancient Roman roads, made friends with people who spoke a different language, and even rescued a kitten!

Tomorrow they would fly back to the Netherlands, but Milky would always carry Turkey in her heart—a country where a little spotted dachshund could be a brave balloon traveler and a hero to lost kittens, all in the same amazing adventure.

The Dog and Crab Friends

A little dog ran to the sea,
And met a crab as happy as can be.
"Hello there, friend!" the dog did say,
"Let's go outside and play today!"

The crab said "Yes!" and clapped his claws,
The dog wagged tail without a pause.
They played together in the sand,
The best of friends across the land.

The dog would fetch a stick so brown,
While crab would scuttle all around.
They splashed and ran along the shore,
And played until they couldn't more.

When day was done and sun went down,
They said goodbye without a frown.
"See you tomorrow, friend so dear!"
Their friendship grows throughout the year.

Then on Christmas Eve so bright,
They looked back with pure delight.
Both had worked and both had played,
The best friendship they had made.

Milky's Fun Facts

Crabs walk sideways - Crabs can't walk forward like we do! Their legs are built in a special way that makes them scuttle sideways across the sand. It looks like they're doing a funny dance wherever they go.

They grow new claws - If a crab loses a claw in a fight or accident, don't worry! They can grow a brand new one. It takes a few times of shedding their shell, but eventually they'll have a perfect new claw again.

Crabs live in shells they find - Hermit crabs don't grow their own shells like other crabs. Instead, they go "house hunting" on the beach, trying on different empty shells until they find one that fits just right, like trying on shoes!

"Here's Milky's special coloring page just for you! We hope you have lots of fun coloring this picture and making it beautiful."

(ps. maybe you can color Milky too!)

Milky and the Parrot are having a chat, what do you think they are saying to each other. Put your answer here:

Milky's Fun Fact

Parrots don't just copy sounds - they can actually learn what words mean! Some smart parrots like African Greys can learn hundreds of words and use them correctly. They might say "want water" when they're thirsty or "bye bye" when someone leaves. It's like having a conversation with a bird!

They're one of the few animals that are "lefties" or "righties" just like people! Most parrots prefer to use one foot over the other to pick up food and toys. You can watch a parrot and figure out if it's left-footed or right-footed by seeing which foot it uses most.

Parrot beaks never stop growing. Just like your fingernails, a parrot's beak keeps growing throughout its whole life. They wear it down naturally by chewing on branches, toys, and food. If they don't chew enough, their beaks can get too long!

The Camel and Milky's Christmas Adventure

There once was a camel so big and so tall,
Who walked in the desert with wise men and all.
With gifts on his back and the sun way up high,
They looked for a star in the big desert sky

.Little dog Milky lived out in the sand,
He ran and he played in the hot desert land.
One day he met Camel who told him a tale,
About a long trip on the desert trail.

"Tell me," said Milky, "about that bright star,
When wise men brought gifts from a land very far.
"The camel looked down with his big kind eyes,
"I helped carry gifts under desert skies."

"We walked days through the sand hot and deep,
The desert was quiet, no sound, not a peep.
The star way up high was so bright and so true,
It led us to baby Jesus, so sweet and so new.

"Now Milky and Camel are friends every day,
They sit in the desert and often they play.
They talk about Christmas and that special night,
When love came to earth in the warm desert light.

Milky's Fun Facts

Camels can drink 40 gallons of water in just 15 minutes! That's like drinking 320 water bottles all at once without stopping. When they find water after being thirsty, they become like living water balloons.

A camel's hump isn't filled with water - it's packed with fat! This fat works like a built-in lunch box that keeps them fed when there's no food around. When they use up the fat, their hump actually gets smaller and floppier.

Camels have three eyelids and two rows of super long eyelashes to protect their eyes from sandstorms. It's like they're wearing natural goggles and have the most fabulous eyelashes in the desert - they'd definitely win any eyelash contest!

Milky's New Zealand Adventure

Milky was getting quite famous for her world travels, but when Linda announced their next destination, even the well-traveled little Milky was amazed.

"New Zealand, Milky!" Linda said excitedly, spreading out a colorful map. "It's called the Land of the Long White Cloud, and it's home to some of the most unusual animals you've ever imagined!"

Milky studied the map with her intelligent brown eyes. New Zealand looked like two green islands floating far away in the bright blue Pacific Ocean. She had been to Africa, lived in the Netherlands, explored Turkey, and now she was going to visit a country where, Linda explained, there were birds that couldn't fly and animals that only came out at night!

The long airplane journey took them over snow-capped mountains, endless ocean, and finally to Auckland, where Milky's first surprise was waiting. As they walked through the airport, she heard the most unusual sounds—not barking or meowing, but strange clicking and whistling noises!

"Those are native bird calls," explained their Kiwi guide, James, a cheerful man with a big smile who was waiting to meet them. "In New Zealand, we have more unique birds than anywhere else in the world. Wait until you meet some of them!"

Their first adventure took them to Rotorua, a place that smelled like rotten eggs but was actually full of amazing hot springs and geysers. Milky wrinkled her spotted nose at the sulfur smell, but her curiosity quickly took over when she saw steam shooting up from the ground like dragon's breath!

"This is geothermal activity," James explained to Linda while Milky sniffed cautiously at the warm ground. "The earth is showing off its power here!"

But the real excitement began when they reached the Redwood Forest. As they walked along the elevated treetop walkway, high above the forest floor, Milky suddenly heard a deep, booming sound that made her fur stand on end.

"What was that?" she woofed nervously.

James grinned. "That, little traveler, was a kakapo calling! They're the world's heaviest parrots, and they can't fly. There are only about 250 left in the whole world, so you're very lucky to hear one!"

As if summoned by his words, the most extraordinary bird Milky had ever seen waddled out from behind a tree. It was enormous—almost as big as Milky herself—with beautiful green feathers that looked like they were designed for a fairy tale.

"Kia ora!" the kakapo squawked, which James explained meant "hello" in Māori, the language of New Zealand's indigenous people.

"Kia ora!" Milky barked back, her tail wagging with delight. She had never met a parrot who was bigger than she was and couldn't fly!

The kakapo, whose name was Manu, was fascinated by Milky's piebald markings. "You have very unusual feathers... er, fur," Manu observed thoughtfully. "Are you perhaps a rare breed of ground bird like me?"

Milky giggled. "I come from a long line of sausage dogs, but I've traveled here all the way from Africa, through the Netherlands and Turkey!"

"A fellow world explorer!" Manu exclaimed. "Though I must admit, I explore mostly by walking. These wings are more for balance than flying."

Their friendship was interrupted by a park ranger who came running up the path, looking worried. "James! We have a problem. A group of school children were hiking the lower trail when they spotted a baby kiwi bird that seems to be lost. The mother is nowhere to be found, and we can't get close enough to help—kiwis are very shy and easily frightened."

Milky's ears perked up immediately. Throughout all her travels, she had discovered she had a special talent for helping scared animals. "I'd like to help!" she offered eagerly.

James looked thoughtful. "You know, Milky might be exactly what we need. She's small, gentle, and has experience with nervous animals. Plus, kiwis are closer to her size than we are."

They carefully made their way down to the forest floor, where they found the tiniest, fluffiest bird Milky had ever seen. The baby kiwi was about the size of a tennis ball, with soft brown feathers and a long, thin beak perfect for poking into the ground looking for worms.

"Hello, little one," Milky said softly, approaching very slowly. "My name is Milky. Are you lost?"

The baby kiwi looked up with bright, scared eyes. "I... I was following my mama, looking for food. But then I heard a loud noise—I think it was one of those big flying machines—and I ran and ran, and now I don't know where I am!"

Milky's heart melted. "Don't worry. I'm very good at finding things. My long nose is excellent for following scents. Can you smell your mama anywhere?"

The little kiwi sniffed the air carefully with his long beak. "Yes! She smells like... like fresh earth and the special grubs we were digging for this morning. The scent is coming from that direction!" He pointed toward a dense patch of ferns.

"Perfect!" Milky announced. "Follow me, but stay close. We'll find your mama together."

Using her experienced tracking skills—the same ones that had helped her find Luna the seal on Texel and rescue the kitten in Turkey—Milky led the baby kiwi through the forest. Her white and tan coat made her easy to spot among the green ferns, and the little kiwi stayed right behind her.

Soon they heard a frantic calling sound from ahead. "That's Mama!" the baby kiwi chirped excitedly.

Sure enough, a larger kiwi bird came rushing through the underbrush, her relief obvious as she gathered her baby close with her wings.

"Thank you, spotted dog," the mother kiwi said gratefully. "Kiwis aren't used to getting help from four-legged friends, but you've shown great kindness to our family."

The park ranger was amazed when Milky led both kiwis safely back to the group. "That was incredible, Milky! You've helped reunite one of New Zealand's most precious bird families."

That evening, as they stayed in a cozy lodge overlooking Lake Taupo, Linda scratched behind Milky's ears while they watched the Southern Cross constellation appear in the crystal-clear night sky.

"You've done it again, my brave little explorer," Linda said proudly. "Every country we visit, you find a way to help the local wildlife."

Milky wagged her tail contentedly. New Zealand had been full of surprises—flightless parrots, underground steam, and the tiniest, fluffiest birds she'd ever met. But best of all, she had learned that no matter how far from home she traveled, there were always new friends to meet and ways to help others.

As she fell asleep to the sound of native birds calling across the lake, Milky dreamed of kakapo feathers and kiwi beaks, already wondering what amazing adventure awaited her next. The world was full of wonderful places and creatures, and her spotted coat seemed to be a passport to friendship wherever she roamed.

Who Am I?

For the young ones

1. Who Am I? I have a big white beard and wear a red suit. Milky always barks when he hears my sleigh bells on Christmas Eve. I bring presents to good children all around the world.
2. Who Am I? I'm Milky's best friend and I live in his house. On Christmas morning, I get up early to open presents under the tree. I leave milk and cookies out for Santa.
3. Who Am I? I'm furry and have four legs just like Milky, but I have antlers on my head. I help Santa pull his sleigh through the sky on Christmas night.
4. Who Am I? I'm small and green and wear a pointy hat. I work in Santa's workshop making toys. Milky thinks I'm funny because I'm shorter than he is!
5. Who Am I? Milky loves to sniff around me on Christmas morning. I'm wrapped in colorful paper with ribbons and bows. Children shake me to guess what's inside.
6. Who Am I? I'm round and white with stick arms. Milky likes to play in the yard with me after it snows. I wear a carrot for a nose and have coal for eyes.
7. Who Am I? I'm green and tall and stand in the living room at Christmas time. Milky likes to sleep under me. I'm covered with lights and ornaments and have a star on top.
8. Who Am I? I have a red nose that glows bright. Milky would love to meet me because I'm famous! Santa asks me to guide his sleigh when it's foggy.
9. Who Am I? I'm made of gingerbread and look like a little person. Milky wishes he could eat me, but I'm meant for children to enjoy. I have icing decorations and candy buttons.
10. Who Am I? I jingle and ring when the wind blows. Milky's ears perk up when he hears my sound. You can find me on Santa's sleigh and on Christmas decorations.

A bit more Challenging

1. Who Am I? I'm made of wax and have a flame on top. When Milky's family has a special Christmas dinner, they light me up to make the room glow. I come in many colors and sizes, and I slowly get smaller as the evening goes on.
2. Who Am I? Milky hears me making music, but I have no voice of my own. People hold me in their hands and shake me back and forth. I'm filled with tiny metal pieces that dance around inside me. You'll hear me ringing during Christmas songs.
3. Who Am I? I'm invisible, but Milky can feel me on his fur when we go outside. I make the tree branches dance and the Christmas lights sway. I carry the sound of sleigh bells through the night air. Sometimes I'm gentle, sometimes I howl.
4. Who Am I? Milky watches me twinkle in the dark December sky, but I'm much farther away than the Christmas tree lights. Long ago, one just like me guided three wise men on a very important journey. I'm made of burning gas, not electricity.
5. Who Am I? I live inside your house but I'm always hungry for wood. Milky likes to lie near me because I keep him warm and cozy. Santa uses me to get into your house on Christmas Eve. I crackle and pop and make orange and yellow light dance on the walls.

Milky's Christmas Word Search

S	B	Y	E	S
T	M	E	A	T
A	I	L	L	P
R	L	L	Z	L
R	K	O	A	O
O	Y	G	T	T
S	A	N	T	A
Y	D	N	A	C

Help Milky find the words

Milky, Santa, Bell, Star, Candy

C	A	R	O	L	W	E	K	A	C
A	H	A	N	O	H	A	Z	P	A
R	A	R	E	V	A	Y	X	O	T
R	P	E	I	O	T	K	C	P	C
Y	P	R	N	S	C	L	V	P	H
U	P	I	T	O	T	I	B	E	T
N	Y	N	H	M	H	M	G	R	H
F	A	D	E	E	I	O	A	R	E
S	N	A	S	R	S	N	E	S	S
A	G	F	N	S	R	E	H	T	H
N	I	G	E	G	E	Y	N	H	O
T	N	G	O	O	E	T	N	I	L
A	L	T	Q	F	K	L	V	J	L
N	R	U	D	O	L	P	H	M	Y
B	O	E	Y	W	O	R	E	A	E
I	V	M	I	F	M	E	A	N	L
R	A	T	S	U	E	S	V	N	L
E	E	N	R	N	R	E	Y	E	O
R	S	B	E	R	S	N	I	R	W
D	B	R	P	E	D	T	N	S	T
F	E	E	E	L	I	G	H	T	S
I	L	Q	A	E	T	G	E	H	U
B	L	R	E	I	N	D	E	E	R
E	S	U	T	E	P	J	T	I	B

Words: Milky, Santa, Rudolph, Present, Christmas, Carol, Bells, Star, Angel, Holly, Lights, Sleigh, Tree, Snowman, Stocking, Reindeer, Cake

Hey little dog, why are you so exhausted and sleepy. I know we had our Christmas party last night, but didn't you have fun!

I had great fun Panda, but I danced all night, so I am tired. I noticed you just layed around with your friends eating.

Panda and Milky's Christmas Party

At the Christmas party bright and merry,
Panda found the bamboo berry.
Little Milky wagged his tail,
Ready for a dancing tale!

Panda munched through Christmas night,
Bamboo snacks were pure delight.
Milky spun and twirled around,
Paws barely touching snowy ground.

"More bamboo!" called Panda Bear,
While Milky danced without a care.
One friend eating, one friend dancing,
Christmas magic was enhancing!

When the party came to end,
Panda full, and Milky's blend
Of tired paws and happy heart,
Made this Christmas off the chart.

Milky's Fun Facts

Pandas are bamboo-eating machines but they're really bad at it - they spend 14 hours a day just eating bamboo, but their stomachs can only digest about 17% of what they eat! It's like if you had to eat pizza all day long but could only get nutrition from the crust. They basically have to eat constantly just to get enough energy to... eat more bamboo!

Pandas are terrible at being bears - they're supposed to be fierce predators, but pandas are so clumsy they fall out of trees all the time! Baby pandas tumble and roll around like fluffy bowling balls. They're basically the goofiest bears in the world and spend most of their time just bumbling around.

Pandas can only see in black and white, just like their fur! This means they live in a world that matches their coloring perfectly - everything looks like a panda movie to them.

Milky and the Christmas Zebra

In the African bush on Christmas day,
Little dog Milky went out to play.
Through acacia trees with bells that chimed,
She looked for friends at Christmas time.

'Behind a baobab tree so wide,
A baby zebra tried to hide.
"Don't be scared," barked Milky small,
"Christmas magic comes to all!"

"The zebra foal with stripes so neat,
Had never seen such tiny feet.
"I'm Zippy," said the zebra shy,
"I've never had a friend so spry!"

They played beneath the Southern Cross,
Through desert sand and Christmas moss.
Milky shared her Christmas bone,
Zippy showed his grassland home.

Milky's Fun Facts

Zebras make weird noises that sound like barking dogs - instead of neighing like horses, zebras make this funny barking sound called a "bark" or sometimes they make a sound like "kwa-ha-ha" that sounds like they're laughing at their own jokes!

Zebras can kick in almost any direction, even sideways - their kick is so powerful it can break a lion's jaw! They're like martial arts experts with hooves, and they can kick backwards, forwards, and even to the side without warning.

Zebras roll around in dirt and mud on purpose to make themselves extra stinky - they cover themselves in dust and mud as a kind of natural bug spray and sunscreen. So not only do they look fancy with their stripes, they also smell terrible most of the time!

Milky's Christmas Adventure - The Final Story

It was Christmas Eve, and Milky was curled up by the fireplace, looking at all her adventure photos scattered across the floor. There were pictures from Iceland with her puffin friends, more photos from Australia with Ruby the kangaroo, and so many more memories from her travels around the world.

"What are you thinking about, little one?" asked Mum, settling down beside her fluffy white dog.

Milky wagged her tail gently. She was thinking about all the wonderful animals she'd met – from the brave Icelandic horses to the laughing kookaburras, from Arctic foxes to desert echidnas. Each friend had taught her something special about kindness, courage, and friendship.

As the snow began to fall outside their window, Milky heard familiar sounds. A kookaburra's laugh echoed in the distance, followed by the gentle whinny of horses. But that was impossible – they were back home, far from Iceland and Australia!

Milky padded to the window and gasped. In their snowy garden stood all her animal friends from around the world! Frost the Icelandic horse was there with his silver mane sparkling in the moonlight. Ruby the kangaroo had somehow hopped all the way from Australia, with her joey peeking out excitedly. Even Pippa the puffin and Kenny the kookaburra had come to visit.

"Merry Christmas, Milky!" they all called together. "We couldn't let Christmas pass without seeing our favorite adventurer!"

Milky's heart felt so full of joy that she thought it might burst. She ran outside into the snow, where all her friends gathered around her. They shared stories of their homes, played games in the snow, and reminded each other of all their exciting adventures together.

As the clock struck midnight and Christmas Day began, Frost stepped forward. "Milky, you've shown us that friendship has no borders. You've brought animals from all over the world together with your kind heart."

"And now," added Ruby, "wherever we are, we'll always be connected by the adventures we've shared."

Milky looked around at all her friends – some with fur, some with feathers, some with scales, all with hearts full of love. She realized that the greatest adventure of all wasn't traveling to distant places, but the friendships she'd made along the way.

"Thank you all for being my friends," Milky said, her voice warm with happiness. "You've made every adventure magical."

As the first light of Christmas morning began to shine, her friends started to fade like a beautiful dream. But Milky wasn't sad. She knew that somewhere in Iceland, Pippa was teaching her chicks about the brave little dog who visited them. In Australia, Ruby was telling her joey about their fluffy friend. And in countries all around the world, animals were sharing stories of Milky's kindness.

Mum found Milky still by the window, tail wagging peacefully. "Ready for Christmas breakfast, my little explorer?"

Milky barked happily and trotted to her bowl. Her traveling days might be over, but her heart would always be full of wonderful memories and friends from every corner of the world.

And on quiet nights, when the wind whispered through the trees, Milky could still hear the distant calls of her friends, reminding her that true friendship lasts forever.

Thank you for joining Milky on all her adventures! From her very first journey to this final Christmas tale, Milky has shown us that the world is full of friends waiting to be discovered, and that kindness is a language every creature understands.

Merry Christmas to all!

Find the difference 1

Tricky level

1. Milky's collar is gone
2. Branch on tree on the Left is longer
- 3 Color of chest of animal behind elephant is different
4. Elephant's tongue is gone
- 5 Elephants eye brow is different
- 6 More flowers in the pond in front of rainbow
- 7 Blue butterfly above elephant is missing
- 8 small animal in front of elephant was not previously there
- 9 Flower on right hand side different color
- 10 Bird in tree in front of elephant

Simple level

1. Presents under the tree
- 2 Coat of the girl in glass bubble is different
- 3 Star on right hand side is different color
- 4 Milky has a red bow tie
- 5 Animal behind Milky is gone

Riddles:

Candy Bar, Snowman, Bells,
Christmas Tree, Reindeer,
Present/gift, Ornament on Christmas tree, Snowball,
Santa, Snow flakes, Stocking

Fill in the blank

Young

- 1 Suit/Coat
- 2 Nose
- 3 Stocking
- 4 Present/Gift
- 5 Reindeer
- 6 Tree
- 7 North
- 8 Cookies
- 9 Snowman
- 10 Present/Gift

Challenged

- Star
Twice
Wreath
Eve
Partridge
Chestnuts
North
Cane
Stocking
Holly

Answers

Find the difference 2

Tricky level

1. Light/Ball hanging on right is different
- 2 Girl on right has no ears
- 3 More presents on right side
- 4 Santa missing a gold button
- 5 Santa has no tongue
- 6 Red end of dumbbell that Santa is holding
- 7 More gold tinsel on the tree
- 8 Girl on left side has dark scarf
- 9 Girl on left side has her hand behind tree
- 10 Reindeer on left side has no snow on face

Simple level

- 1 Bells on top of the house
- 2 Center of wreath different
- 3 No window on left
- 4 Milky has a red bow tie
- 5 Cat at left of the front door

i am so proud of how hard you worked on these,
and remember, that we learn from our mistakes too.

Answers

C	A	R	O	L		E	K	A	C
	H
		R				Y
			I			K
				S		L
					T	I
						M
							A
S		A						S
A			N						H
N				G					O
T					E				L
A						L			L
	R	U	D	O	L	P	H		Y
						R
						E
R	A	T	S			S
						E
						N
	B					T
E				L	I	G	H	T	S
L
L	R	E	I	N	D	E	E	R
S

Words: Milky, Santa, Rudolph, Present, Christmas, Carol, Bells, Star, Angel, Holly, Lights, Sleigh, Tree, Snowman, Stocking, Reindeer, Cake

S	B
T	M	E
A	I		L
R	L			L
	K
	Y
S	A	N	T	A
Y	D	N	A	C

Milky, Santa, Bell, Star, Candy

D		O	C	T	O	P	U	S
O						B	A	R	C
G
	P	E	N	G	U	I	N
						Z
G	I	R	A	F	F	E
						B		D
S	F	I	S	H		R		O
N					Y	A		L
A				K				P
I			L					H
L		I						I
	M		S	H	A	R	K	N
F						R
	L					A
		Y	T			B
		A				B
	O					I
G						T		E
								S
			C	A	T			R
								O
								H
E	L	E	P	H	A	N	T

Words: Milky, dog, cat, penguin, rabbit, dolphin, goat, horse, fish, crab, elephant, giraffe, fly, shark, octopus, snail, zebra

R	B	E	A	R
A
T	D			H
	O		S
	G	I
	F
M	I	L	K	Y

Milky, dog, bear, frog, rat, fish

Baby and Adult Match:

1. Lamb → Sheep
2. Calf → Cow
3. Foal → Horse
4. Chick → Chicken
5. Duckling → Duck
6. Piglet → Pig
7. Kitten → Cat
8. Puppy → Dog
9. Kid → Goat
10. Cub → Bear

1. Fry → Fish
2. Tadpole → Frog
3. Cygnet → Swan
4. Leveret → Hare
5. Elver → Eel
6. Fingerling → Salmo
7. Pup → Seal
8. Calf → Whale
9. Spat → Oyster
10. Ephyra → Jellyfish

Answers

Word Search

C	A	R	O	L		E	K	A	C
	H
		R				Y
			I			K
				S		L
					T	I
						M
							A
S		A						S
A			N						H
N				G					O
T					E				L
A						L			L
	R	U	D	O	L	P	H		Y
						R
						E
R	A	T	S			S
						E
						N
		B				T
	E			L	I	G	H	T	S
	L
	L	R	E	I	N	D	E	E	R
	S

Words: Milky, Santa, Rudolph, Present, Christmas, Carol, Belts, Star, Angel, Holly, Lights, Sleigh, Tree, Snowman, Stocking, Reindeer, Cake

S	B
T	M	E
A	I		L
R	L			L
	K
	Y
S	A	N	T	A
Y	D	N	A	C

Milky, Santa, Bell, Star, Candy

D			O	C	T	O	P	U	S
O							B	A	R	C
G		P	E	N	G	U	I	N
							Z
G	I	R	A	F	F	E			D
S	F	I	S	H		B			O	L
N					Y	A			L	P
A				K					H	I
I			L
L		I
	M		S	H	A	R	K		N
F						R
	L					A
		Y	T			B
		A				B
						I
G		O				T			E
									S
			C	A	T				R
									O
									H
	E	L	E	P	H	A	N	T

Words: Milky, dog, cat, penguin, rabbit, dolphin, goat, horse, fish, crab, elephant, giraffe, fly, shark, octopus, snail, zebra

R	B	E	A	R
A
T	D			H
	O		S
	G	I
	F
M	I	L	K	Y

Milky, dog, bear, frog, rat, fish

